DETAILED ACTION

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Claims 1 to 4, 6 to 8, 11 to 14 and 16 to 18 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Nishizawa et al in view of Maley et al and Abelson et al.

The Nishizawa et al reference teaches a method and apparatus for the controlled growth of silicon. A substrate is placed in a chamber and heated to deposition temperatures. Source gases are flowed in the direction of the substrate and over the substrate to create a layer. There is a means to monitor the growth and feed the data to a controller, which changes flow rates, note entire reference. The sole difference between the instant claims and the prior art is the monitoring of the hydrogen partial pressures. However, the Maley et al and Abelson et al references teach monitoring hydrogen partial pressures during deposition and using the data to control of growth, note abstracts. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to modify the Nishizawa et al reference by the teachings of the Maley et al and Abelson et al references to monitor hydrogen partial pressures in order to enhance control over the growth of the layer even to the single layer level.

Claims 5, 9, 10, 15, 19 and 120 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Nishizawa et al in view of Maley et al, Abelson et al. and Dubbelday et al.

The Nishizawa et al ,Maley et al., and Abelson et al. references are relied on for the same reasons as stated, supra, and differ from the instant claims in the growth of SiGe. The Dubbelday et al reference teaches growing SiGe layers, note col. 2 It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to modify the Nishizawa et al reference by the teachings of the Dubbelday et al reference to deposit SiGe in order to increase the quality of the layer.
